- Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI): For individuals who have worked long enough and paid Social Security taxes.
- Supplemental Security Income (SSI): For individuals with limited income and resources who are disabled or blind.

Qualifying for Disability Benefits

To qualify for SSD benefits, you must meet the following criteria:

- You must have a physical or mental impairment that prevents you from working.
- Your impairment must be expected to last at least one year or result in death.
- For SSDI, you must have worked long enough and paid Social Security taxes.
- For SSI, you must meet certain income and resource limits.

Filing a Claim

To file a claim for SSD benefits, you can:

- Apply online at www.ssa.gov/benefits/disability.
- Call the SSA at 1-800-772-1213.
- Visit your local SSA office.

Evidence Required

When you file your claim, you will need to provide evidence to support your disability. This may include:

- Medical records
- Statements from your doctors
- Work history
- Financial information

The Application Process

The application process can take several months. The SSA will review your claim and determine if you are eligible for benefits. If you are approved, you will start receiving benefits within 60 days.

If you are denied, you have the right to appeal the decision. You can request a reconsideration, a hearing, or a review by the Appeals Council.

Getting Legal Help

Filing a Social Security Disability claim can be complex. If you are struggling with the process, you may want to consider getting legal help. A disability lawyer can help you gather evidence, file your claim, and represent you at hearings.

Filing a Social Security Disability claim can be a life-changing event. This guide provides you with the knowledge and tools you need to navigate the process and improve your chances of success.

If you have any questions, please contact the SSA or a disability lawyer.
