Rosenberg was the chief Nazi ideologue, responsible for developing the party's racial and anti-Semitic doctrines. Frick was the Minister of the Interior and played a key role in the implementation of the Nazi Gleichschaltung (coordination) laws. Frank was the Governor-General of occupied Poland and was responsible for the implementation of the Holocaust in that country. Schacht was the Minister of Economics and played a key role in the Nazi rearmament program.

The documents in this book provide a firsthand account of the Nazi regime's decision-making process and its implementation of its policies. They offer a valuable resource for scholars and students of the Holocaust and the Nazi era.
