

The Constitution of California: A Deep Dive into the Golden State's Governing Document

The Constitution of California is the governing document of the state of California. It was adopted in 1879 and has been amended numerous times since then. The constitution establishes the structure of the state government, defines the rights of citizens, and provides for the protection of the environment.

History of the Constitution of California

The first constitution of California was adopted in 1849, shortly after California became a state. This constitution was modeled on the Constitution of the United States and established a three-branch government with a governor, a legislature, and a judiciary. However, this constitution was soon found to be inadequate, and a new constitution was adopted in 1879.
